

Worksheet: Whose Tweet Is It?

Who Said That?

The Great Gatsby is full of distinct characters. Imagine that social media existed in the 1920s. Match each post with its likely writer.

Tell us how you really feel, Tom. He certainly has his standards, but they don't apply to him, of course. Maybe he should look in the mirror.

Jay Gatsby @JGatsEnterprises Listen to your realtor—Location, Location, Location! I should have bought a mansion on the other Egg. #LifeProTips #HitTheResetButton 😞

A mansion is only as great as its address. Looks like Gatsby has learned a little too late to take advice from others.

Must be nice to be Jordan—she golfs for a living, freeloards off friends, and doesn't have a care in the world. She could use a driving lesson, though, and we don't mean golf.

George Wilson @GBWcarsandgas Good things come to those who wait. One of these days, a good opportunity will come along. I'm just so tired of waiting for it. #HangingInThere #BusinessAsUsual 🚗💊

George needs more than a good opportunity; he needs a new business plan and perhaps some vitamins.

Poor Daisy. Life can be so hard when you're rich. But seriously—she has a huge estate and didn't put in a pool? Guess she wasn't invited to the planning party.

Sometimes it's tough to be the only adult in the room. Nick should do himself a favor—ditch those ungrateful energy vampires and go home.

Myrtle needs a reality check. Everyone knows that these things never end well. Not that we're foreshadowing anything.
