

EVERY STORY HAS A PLOT—the sequence of events that explain what happens. Although not all stories tell events in chronological order, they do all have a beginning, middle, and end. The plot structure of a story explains how the events are organized and presented. The most common plot structure model is made up of five parts.

Climax

Rising Action

Falling Action

Exposition

Resolution

What is Plot Structure?