Activity I: Map MakingPre-Reading

The Giver is about a group of people who try to make a perfect community called a utopia, a place where nothing bad happens. The author, Lois Lowry, describes the community's buildings and the surroundings, and tells you a few details, but for the most part, she does not tell you where everything is placed. The only things you know for sure are that there is a path beside the river, a landing field on the other side of the river, and that when Jonas is in the Central Plaza, he can see the river behind the Auditorium.

Pretend you are a city planner and have been employed to design the layout of the community. Using the following list, draw a map of the community in The Giver. Before you start drawing, think about your design. Where would the various buildings and their surroundings be best placed? To make sure you don't miss anything important, be sure to cross off each item after you have drawn it.

Make your work neat, and be prepared to explain to the class your reasons for your placement of each item.

Activity II: ResearchPre-Reading

POSTER DUE DATE: _____

There have been many planned Utopian communities in the history of our country. Read the following list of twenty such communities that are still open to the public. Find out some basic information about the community you are assigned to research, including the street and e-mail address, as well as phone number. Call or write for brochures. Then, use whatever illustrations you are sent to make a poster, on which you write at least five interesting facts about your community. If you don't receive any illustrations, you can draw pictures or write extra information on your poster. Include the name, city, and state of your community on the front of the poster, and put the street, email address, and phone number on the back.

Activity I: ToneThe Opening Page

Lois Lowry begins The Giver in December, a cold month with short, dark days. She describes Jonas, her protagonist or main character, as “beginning to be frightened.” (Pg. 1) With the very first sentence, she has set the tone, or mood, of her story. Re-read the first page of The Giver again and answer the following questions:

1. How many times is the word “frightened” or “frightening” used?
2. What other words fit the mood the author has established in her first sentence?
3. How do the characters react to the appearance of the plane?
4. How is the plane described?
5. Does the description of the plane fit the tone, or mood, of the story? Why or why not?
6. If you had to think of one word to describe the tone, or mood, of this page, what would it be?

Activity II: The Book of Rules Chapters 1-2

Very early in this book, you learn that there are many rules this community follows. They are written in the Book of Rules. Although you never see this book, you can tell by what happens in the story what these rules are. For example, on page two, you learn that the Pilot-in-Training who “misread his navigational instructions and made a wrong turn” will be released. You also learn that release is a “terrible punishment, an overwhelming statement of failure.” At this point, however, you do not know exactly what the punishment is. However, you can conclude that there is a rule something like this: Anyone who makes a mistake that is considered very serious will be released.

As you read the first two chapters, list any rules you encounter in the following RULES CHART. Be sure to provide the page number(s) where you found each rule. The first one has been done for you as an example.

5. Why doesn't the author tell the reader what happened to the apple?
6. Do you think there is any relation between Jonas' eyes and the apple?
7. What do you think happened to the apple?
