INTRODUCTION

V*ocabulary Power Plus Classic* combines classroom-tested vocabulary drills with reading and writing exercises designed to prepare students for the revised Scholastic Assessment Test; however, Vocabulary Power Plus Classic is a resource for all students—not just those who are college bound or preparing for the SAT I. This series is intended to increase vocabulary, improve grammar, enhance writing, and boost critical reading skills for students at all levels of learning.

Critical Reading exercises include lengthy passages and detailed questions. We use SAT-style grammar and writing exercises and have placed the vocabulary words in a non-alphabetical sequence.

To reflect the changes to the Writing and Critical Reading portions of the SAT I, Prestwick House includes inferential exercises instead of the analogical reasoning sections. Coupled with words-in-context activities, inferences cultivate comprehensive word discernment by prompting students to create contexts for words instead of simply memorizing definitions.

The writing exercises in Vocabulary Power Plus Classic are process-oriented, but they bring students a step closer to SAT success by exposing them to rubrics that simulate those of the SAT essay-writing component. This exposure to an objective scoring process helps students to develop a concrete understanding of writing fundamentals.

We hope that you find the Vocabulary Power Plus Classic series to be an effective tool for teaching new words and an exceptional tool for preparing for the SAT.

Strategies for Completing Activities

Roots, Prefixes, and Suffixes

A knowledge of roots, prefixes, and suffixes can give readers the ability to view unfamiliar words as puzzles that require only a few simple steps to solve. For the person interested in the history of words, this knowledge provides the ability to track word origin and evolution. For those who seek to improve vocabulary, this knowledge creates a sure and lifelong method; however, there are two points to remember:

1. Some words have evolved through usage, so present definitions might differ from what you infer through an examination of the roots and prefixes. The word abstruse, for example, contains the prefix ab (away) and the root trudere (to thrust), and literally means to thrust away. Today, abstruse is used to describe something that is hard to understand.
2. Certain roots do not apply to all words that use the same form. If you know that the root vin means “to conquer,” then you would be correct in concluding that the word invincible means “incapable of being conquered”; however, if you tried to apply the same root meaning to vindicate or vindictive, you would be incorrect. When analyzing unfamiliar words, check for other possible roots if your inferred meaning does not fit the context.

Despite these considerations, a knowledge of roots and prefixes is one of the best ways to build a powerful vocabulary.

Critical Reading

Reading questions generally fall into several categories.

1. Identifying the main idea or the author’s purpose. Generally, the question will ask, “What is this selection about?”

In some passages, the author’s purpose will be easy to identify because the one or two ideas leap from the text; however, other passages might not be so easily analyzed, especially if they include convoluted sentences. Inverted sentences (subject at the end of the sentence) and elliptical sentences (words missing) will also increase the difficulty of the passages, but all of these obstacles can be overcome if readers take one sentence at a time and recast it in their own words. Consider the following sentence:

These writers either jot down their thoughts bit by bit, in short, ambiguous, and paradoxical sentences, which apparently mean much more than they say—of this kind of writing Schelling's treatises on natural philosophy are a splendid instance; or else they hold forth with a deluge of words and the most intolerable diffusiveness, as though no end of fuss were necessary to make the reader understand the deep meaning of their sentences, whereas it is some quite simple if not actually trivial idea, examples of which may be found in plenty in the popular works of Fichte, and the philosophical manuals of a hundred other miserable dunces.

If we edit out some of the words, the main point of this sentence is obvious.

These writers either jot down their thoughts bit by bit, in short, sentences, which apparently mean much more than they say or they hold a deluge of words as though necessary to make the reader understand the deep meaning of their sentences

Some sentences need only a few deletions for clarification, but others require major recasting and additions; they must be read carefully and put into the reader's own words.

Some in their discourse desire rather commendation of wit, in being able to hold all arguments, than of judgment, in discerning what is true; as if it were a praise to know what might be said, and not what should be thought.

After studying it, a reader might recast the sentence as follows:

In conversation, some people desire praise for their abilities to maintain the conversation rather than their abilities to identify what is true or false, as though it were better to sound good than to know what is truth or fiction.

2. Identifying the stated or implied meaning. What is the author stating or suggesting?

The literal meaning of a text does not always correspond with the intended meaning. To understand a passage fully, readers must determine which meaning—if there is more than one—is the intended meaning of the passage.

Consider the following sentence:

If his notice was sought, an expression of courtesy and interest gleamed out upon his features; proving that there was light within him and that it was only the outward medium of the intellectual lamp that obstructed the rays in their passage.

Interpreted literally, this Nathaniel Hawthorne metaphor suggests that a light-generating lamp exists inside of the human body. Since this is impossible, the reader must look to the metaphoric meaning of the passage to properly understand it. In the metaphor, Hawthorne refers to the human mind—consciousness—as a lamp that emits light, and other people cannot always see the lamp because the outside “medium”—the human body—sometimes blocks it.

3. Identifying the tone or mood of the selection. What feeling does the text evoke?

To answer these types of questions, readers must look closely at individual words and their connotations; for example, the words stubborn and firm have almost the same definition, but a writer who describes a character as stubborn rather than firm is probably suggesting something negative about the character.

Writing

The new SAT allocates only twenty-five minutes to the composition of a well-organized, fully developed essay. Writing a satisfactory essay in this limited time requires the ability to quickly determine a thesis, organize ideas, and produce adequate examples to support the ideas.

An essay written in twenty minutes might not represent the best process writing—an SAT essay might lack the perfection and depth that weeks of proofreading and editing give to research papers. Process is undoubtedly important, but students must consider the time constraints of the SAT. Completion of the essay is just as important as organization, development, and language use.

The thesis, the organization of ideas, and the support make the framework of a good essay. Before the actual writing begins, writers must create a mental outline by establishing a thesis, or main idea, and one or more specific supporting ideas (the number of ideas will depend on the length and content of the essay). Supporting ideas should not be overcomplicated; they are simply ideas that justify or explain the thesis. The writer must introduce and explain each supporting idea, and the resultant supporting paragraph should answer the why? or who cares? questions that the thesis may evoke.

Once the thesis and supporting ideas are identified, writers must determine the order in which the ideas will appear in the essay. A good introduction usually explains the thesis and briefly introduces the supporting ideas. Explanation of the supporting ideas should follow, with each idea in its own paragraph. The final paragraph, the conclusion, usually restates the thesis or summarizes the main ideas of the essay.

Adhering to the mental outline when the writing begins will help the writer organize and develop the essay. Using the Organization and Development scoring guides to evaluate practice essays will help to reinforce the process skills. The Word Choice and Sentence Formation scoring guides will help to strengthen language skills—the vital counterpart to essay organization and development.

EXERCISE I—Words in Context

From the list below, supply the words needed to complete the paragraph. Some words will not be used.

divulge abet temerity insipid gregarious coerce jaundiced

- A. Jasmine had thought that her irresponsible days of _____ were far behind her until Kayla showed up at her door. After only three days of freedom from the county correctional facility, Kayla had begun her old scheming again. She went to the house to _____ Jasmine into helping her move a truckload of stolen goods to another state—an easy job, she claimed, and virtually no risk. It would even be fun, she claimed.

“Let me get this straight. You’ve been out of jail for three days, and you already want me to _____ you in a crime? Are you crazy?”

Jasmine was still _____ toward her sister because Kayla, prior to her first sentence, “borrowed” Jasmine’s car for a robbery and nearly got Jasmine arrested as a result.

“Sorry, Kayla, but I’m quite happy with my _____, uneventful life. Please leave, and don’t come back.”

From the list below, supply the words needed to complete the paragraph. Some words will not be used.

dogmatic abet gregarious divulge extraneous coerce meticulous

- B. Mr. Knight learned the _____ art of watchmaking during a three-year stay in Switzerland more than forty years ago. Since that time, he has spent countless evenings in his basement workshop assembling the tiny, complex machines. As a[n] _____ grandfather, Mr. Knight often invites his grandchildren to his shop, where they watch with amazement through a large magnifying glass and see a newly assembled pocket watch tick for the first time.

“Watches are such perfect machines; there’s no room for _____ parts or over-engineering. And then, to see such a tiny machine operate under its own power—it amazes me every time.”

When asked about his thoughts on the mass production techniques of modern watches, Knight revealed his _____ belief that Old World skills made watches much more valuable.

“Oh, yes, the new watches are inexpensive and readily available, which fills the practical need, but they lack the sentiment and the many hours of craftsmanship that should go into a fine piece of jewelry.”

“These watches,” he says as he points to a sparkling display cabinet, “have character.”

Mr. Knight hopes someday to _____ the many secrets of his trade to his youngest grandson, who can then carry on the family tradition for years to come.

EXERCISE II—Sentence Completion

Complete the sentence in a way that shows you understand the meaning of the italicized vocabulary word.

1. Rhea lacks temerity, so she definitely would not...
2. I've never been gregarious, so at parties I tend to...
3. Mel thinks musicals are insipid, so when I asked her to see Miss Saigon with me, she...
4. Hikers should avoid packing extraneous gear because...
5. A jaundiced judge might not be able to...
6. Lisa decided to abet the bank robber by...
7. Anna's meticulous cleaning habits ensure that her room is always...
8. I made my psychiatrist promise not to divulge any...
9. My dogmatic English teacher refused to...
10. My boss tried to coerce me into attending the company picnic by...

EXERCISE III—Roots, Prefixes, and Suffixes

Study the entries and answer the questions below.

The prefix mal means “bad” or “evil.”

The root bene means “good.”

The root dict means “to speak.”

The root vol means “to wish.”

The root fact means “making, doing”; factor means “one who does.”

A. Using literal translations as guidance, define the following words without using a dictionary.

- | | |
|----------------|----------------|
| 1. malevolent | 4. benevolent |
| 2. malediction | 5. benediction |
| 3. malefactor | 6. benefactor |

B. After a biopsy, tumors are generally labeled _____ or _____.

C. List as many other related words as you can that begin with either mal or bene.

EXERCISE IV—Inference

Complete the sentences by inferring information about the italicized word from its context.

A. If students complain about a teacher’s insipid lectures, the teacher should...

B. Since dad had a handful of extraneous parts after assembling Kyle’s bicycle, Kyle might...

C. Martin’s refusal to divulge the location of the military base probably means that the base is...

EXERCISE V—Writing

Here is a writing prompt similar to the one you will find on the writing portion of the SAT.

Plan and write an essay based on the following statement:

Happiness is an imaginary condition, formerly often attributed by the living to the dead, now usually attributed by adults to children and by children to adults.

– Thomas Szasz

From: The Columbia World of Quotations.
New York: Columbia University Press, 1996.

Assignment: Do you agree or disagree with Szasz’s view that happiness is merely imaginary? Write an essay in which you support or refute Szasz’s position. Be certain to support your point with evidence from your own reading, classroom studies, and experience.

Thesis: Write a one-sentence response to the above assignment. Make certain this single sentence offers a clear statement of your position.

Example: Happiness is not imaginary, but it is an elusive condition because unhappy people see only the happiness of others.

Organizational Plan: If your thesis is the point on which you want to end, where does your essay need to begin? List the points of development that are inevitable in leading your reader from your beginning point to your end point. This list is your outline.

Draft: Use your thesis as both your beginning and your end. Following your outline, write a good first draft of your essay. Remember to support all your points with examples, facts, references to reading, etc.

Review and Revise: Exchange essays with a classmate. Using the scoring guide for Organization on page 206, score your partner’s essay (while he or she scores yours). Focus on the organizational plan and use of language conventions. If necessary, rewrite your essay to improve the organizational plan and the use of language.

Identifying Sentence Errors

Identify the errors in the following sentences. If the sentence contains no error, select answer E.

1. If the alarm had gone off earlier, more people could of escaped before the building collapsed.
(A) (B) (C)
2. The principals of good sportsmanship demand that we cheer the achievements of both teams.
