SHAKESPEARE AND HIS TIMES

When William Shakespeare (1564-1616) was born in Stratford-on-Avon, England, Queen Elizabeth I was the ruling monarch. It was a time of national strength and wealth, and the prevailing attitude was that life was exciting. It was an age of exploration, not only of the world, but also of man's nature and the English language. Shakespeare's time was also considered the English Renaissance of 1500-1650. Some ideas that characterized this period that are important to this play are:

- Humans had potential for development.
- The idea of medieval Christianity, that this world is a preparation for eternal life, was questioned. Instead, people began to see everyday life as meaningful and an opportunity for noble activity.
- This was a time for heroes. The ideal Elizabethan man was a talented courtier, adventurer, fencer, poet, and conversationalist. He was a witty and eloquent gentleman who examined his own nature and the causes of his actions.
- Marriages were arranged, usually for wealth.
- Women had a lower social status than men.
- People were concerned over the order of things. They felt there was "a great chain of being." This concept originated with Plato and expressed the idea that there is a proper order within all things, and among all things, based on complexity, from the tiniest grains of sand to heaven and God. When everything was in its proper position, there was harmony. When the order was broken, everything was upset and everyone suffered.
- People felt that their rulers were God's agents. To kill a King was a heinous crime; the heavens would show ominous signs when such evil was present.

FEATURES OF SHAKESPEARE'S CHARACTER AND THEME DEVELOPMENT

Formal versus informal forms of address:

Modern English has lost this division, but in the Renaissance, there were two forms of secondperson address—the formal and the informal. As is the case in German and several Romance languages, the formal form of address was used when an inferior was talking to a superior, when two business colleagues who were not close friends were speaking, or when the speaker wanted to maintain a distance. The informal was more intimate, to be used among friends, family members, and persons to whom the speaker wanted to imply closeness.
