Prestwick House developed Vocabulary from Latin and Greek Roots in response to numerous requests for a solid etymology-based vocabulary program. Because the aim of the program is to increase retention of new words as well as to expand students’ vocabulary, we chose to organize the Units by meaning rather than alphabetically. A student who associates a root with an idea will be more likely to correctly assess the definition of that root’s English derivative.

Each Unit contains at least three Latin and/or Greek roots; one or more English vocabulary words are provided for each root. Unit Nine of this book, for example, includes four roots having to do with rolling, twisting, and turning. When a student reads through the Unit, he or she will see the key letters that signal the presence of the root in an English word. The letters in the first root of Unit Nine form the stems TORT, TORQ. Beneath the key letters is the root word from which the English is derived: TORQUERE, TORTUS. Students will notice that there are sometimes two forms of the root, and sometimes one. The inclusion of two forms indicates a Latin verb from which English has taken two different forms. TORQUERE, for instance, gives us the word torque, meaning “a twisting force,” while TORTUS, another form of the verb, gives us extort, meaning “to wrongly or illegally force someone to comply with a demand.” When a root comes from a Latin adjective or noun, only one form will generally be included. Greek roots also appear in only one form.

Beneath the definition of the root, the student will find the word, its pronunciation, part of speech, and English definition. In cases in which an English word has multiple meanings, we have chosen to include only the meaning appropriate to the grade level for which the book is intended. The word temper in this book, then, is a verb meaning “to decrease the strength of,” rather than the more familiar noun meaning “a person’s disposition or mood”; in Level IX, pedestrian means “lacking excitement; ordinary and dull,” rather than “a traveler on foot.” In some instances, students may find it useful to review meanings that do not appear and discuss how they are related to the meaning presented.

If the word has a prefix, or if it is especially difficult to reconcile with its root, the entry will contain an analysis of the parts of the word, followed by a literal definition. Repulsion in Level IX, Unit Five, is explained as re, meaning “back,” + pulsus; the literal meaning is “a pushing back.”

Finally, each entry provides a sentence using the word and, when appropriate, introduces pertinent synonyms and/or antonyms. For added visual reinforcement of this understanding, mnemonic cartoons appear in each Unit.

Six different kinds of exercise follow the Unit entries. They include three kinds of practice using words in context, one test of a student’s ability to infer information based on a word’s meaning, one reading comprehension exercise, and one activity in which a student must deduce the meaning of an unfamiliar word based on knowledge of the word’s root. By the end of the exercises in each Unit, students will have had thorough practice using the word in context and will be prepared to make the word part of their working vocabulary.

Note: We have changed the form of some vocabulary words to make the sentences and exercises more interesting, eliminate awkward phrasing, and avoid excessive repetition. For example, a noun (marvel) may be changed to an adjective (marvelous) or a verb (marveled).

UNIT ONE

VINC, VICT
Latin VINCERE, VICTUM, “to conquer”

INVINCIBLE (in vin’ só bal) adj. unable to be conquered
L. in, “not” + vincere = not able to be conquered
Although the Romans thought of themselves as invincible, they were eventually conquered.

syn: invulnerable ant: vulnerable

PROVINCIAL (prò vin’ shal) adj. limited in knowledge of the world; narrow-minded
L. pro, “forward” + vincere = having to do with a conquered territory Rory’s somewhat provincial outlook made it difficult for her to understand what people in other parts of the world were going through.

ant: sophisticated

EVINCE (i vins’) v. to establish; to reflect the truth of
L. e, “out of” + vincere = to overcome (as with evidence)
The incident at the mill evinced the old saying, “Don’t count your chickens before they hatch.”

DUC, DUCT
Latin DUCERE, DUCTUM, “to lead”

CONDUCIVE (kàn döö’ siv) adj. supportive; encouraging; helping to bring about
L. com, “with” + ducere = leading along with These noisy conditions are not conducive to learning or teaching.

syn: helpful, favorable

INDUCE (in döös’) v. to lead toward some action
L. in, “toward” + ducere = to lead into
Is there any way I can induce you to come for coffee with me?

syn: persuade ant: discourage

DEDUCE (di döös’) v. to draw a conclusion from fact; to infer
L. de, “down, away from” + ducere = to lead down from
The detectives deduced from the evidence that the bank had been robbed not long before they arrived.

syn: conclude

The ancient Romans considered Rome and Italy the center of the civilized world. They thought of people living in the provinces (pro, “outward” + vincere = conquered territories outside Italy) as unsophisticated and far from civilization. The word provincial still carries the idea of narrow-mindedness and lack of sophistication.
TRACT
Latin TRAHERE, TRACTUM, “to drag”

PROTRACTED (prō trak´tid) adj. extended in time; prolonged
L. pro, “forward” + tractum = dragged forward
There was a protracted struggle between the two armies.
syn: lingering ant: brief

INTRACTABLE (in trak´to bōl) adj. stubborn; obstinate; hard to move forward
L. in, “not” + tractum = not able to be drawn forward
Isaiah’s intractable nature made bedtimes difficult for his mother.
syn: immovable ant: malleable

RETRACT (ri trakt´) v. to draw back; to withdraw
L. re, “back” + tractum = to draw back
When I found out I was wrong, I was forced to retract my statement.
syn: repeal

PETO
Latin PETERE, PETITUM, “to seek aggressively; to assail; to rush”

PETULANT (pech´ə lənt) adj. irritable or short-tempered
When I told my little brother to put away his toys, he had a petulant fit and threw the toys down the stairs.

IMPETUOUS (im pech´ō os) adj. acting passionately and without forethought
L. in, “in, toward” + petere = rushing toward Because Barry was a rather impetuous boy, he often found himself getting into fights over little things.
syn: rash ant: careful

IMPETUS (im´pi təs) n. that which drives one; momentum
L. in, “into” + petere = rushing into
The tragic accident at the crossroads was the impetus for a meeting on traffic safety.
syn: stimulus, reason

There are many ways to fight wars, and thousands of books have been written on the subject, but one of the most successful types of fighting is called a “protracted war.” This tactic has been used by smaller countries against larger ones throughout history. Why might it have been so successful?

How do you think the word petulant evolved from the root petere?

Both impetus and impetuous come from the Latin impetere, meaning “attack.”

3. When a businessman's boss criticizes him for being impetuous, we can assume the businessman has probably NOT…

Exercise V. Fill in each blank with the word from the Unit that best completes the sentence, using the root we supply as a clue. Then, answer the questions that follow the paragraphs.

The American mass media has an abiding interest in the paranormal. Television infomercials advertise “psychics” who convince people that they can communicate with the dead; popular television programs pander to the public's love of occult phenomena; Hollywood produces movies that depict supernatural occurrences as factual. As billions of dollars are wasted on 900 numbers, cable subscriptions, and movie tickets, we Americans must become more critical in our acceptance of subjects and events portrayed as legitimate, from séances and extrasensory perception (ESP) to UFOs and alien abductions.

What could __________ (DUC) so many Americans to part with hundreds of dollars to learn “news” of the future or have a glimpse of a departed loved one? Is it because we do not have the knowledge to protect ourselves from intellectual fraud? Surely, we can exercise enough sense to stop calling hotline psychics after dozens of them have been prosecuted for criminal intent to mislead. Yet, 900 numbers exist, offering mind reading, spirit-channeling, and fortune-telling with monotonous regularity; television viewers continue to be convinced of the validity of telepathy, clairvoyance, and reincarnation.

One organization, the Committee for Skeptical Inquiry (CSI), believes that the mass media plays a predominant role in leading the public to accept paranormal events uncritically. If Americans were to think critically about what they were reading and viewing and were also to reject the scientifically unsupported ideas about the paranormal that the media puts forth, the industry that relies so heavily on our gullibility would be bankrupt.

CSI has attempted to counter these popular media claims. In televised specials, members of the organization carefully explain each step of an unexplainable phenomenon, such as the supposed mind reading of a telephone clairvoyant. However, even when these illusions are revealed, the public has a hard time accepting that mind reading is not real. We can __________ (DUC) from this reluctance that shrewd analysis of seemingly occult phenomena is less appealing than the mystique of the unknown is.
Many people are troubled by individuals who do not take the time to investigate outrageous claims. To the mass media, however, a docile public is a reassuring constant. The general population’s inability—and unwillingness—to distinguish a hoax from reality will continue to provide a(n) ________ (PETO) for the media’s focus on paranormal activity long into the future.

1. How does the writer feel about the mass media’s portrayal of the paranormal?
   A. supportive of the mass media’s interest in the paranormal
   B. critical of the media for portraying paranormal activity as unbelievable
   C. angry for creating a nation of non-critical thinkers by challenging Americans to question the paranormal
   D. skeptical about both the paranormal and the media’s motives in focusing on the paranormal

2. What can you logically infer is the reason the words psychics and news are in quotation marks?
   A. The author does not believe in the powers of these people.
   B. The author wants to poke fun at professional mind readers.
   C. The Committee used those specific words in their TV specials.
   D. The author wants to highlight the words for their importance in the passage.

3. Why, according to the author, does the American public fail to distinguish hoaxes from reality?
   A. The media has created a nation of ready consumers.
   B. Americans cannot or will not think critically about the paranormal.
   C. The American public is constantly challenging the claims made in the movies and on television.
   D. Americans are afraid to question the media.

Exercise VI. Drawing on your knowledge of roots and words in context, read the following selection and define the italicized words. If you cannot figure out the meaning of the words on your own, look them up in a dictionary. Note that the prefix tra (from trans) means “across,” and that e (from ex) means “out from.”

The defense attorney attempted to win over the jury in the case by traducing the prosecutor’s star witness. In response to the claim that his witness was an alcoholic, the prosecutor tried to repair the damage done with a series of questions intended to educe a feeling of pity for the witness from the jury. Unfortunately, after the defense’s harsh attack, there was little reason for the jury to believe the witness.
UNIT TWO

FRACT, FRING, FRANG
Latin FRANGERE, FRACTUM, “to break”

FRACTIOUS (frak’shəs) adj. tending to argue or cause discord
Malcolm grew from a fractious and irritable child into a tolerant and peaceful adult.
syn: cross, peevish ant: amiable

INFRACTION (in frak’shən) n. a minor violation of a rule or law
For his infraction of the camp code, Kevin had to peel potatoes in the kitchen.
syn: transgression

INFRINGE (in frinj’) v. to intrude on an area belonging to another; to trespass
Susan said her father was infringing upon her freedom when he took her car.

CIS
Latin CAEDERE, CISUM, “to cut; to kill”

EXCISE (ek’siz) v. to cut out of; to remove Having excised several paragraphs from my essay, I returned to ask my teacher’s advice.
syn: expunge

INCISIVE (in si’ siv) adj. sharply cutting; direct and powerful Natasha’s fast-moving narratives and incisive style never failed to impress us.
syn: keen ant: dull

CONCISE (kən sīs’) adj. brief and straightforward
Because I had only one page to write my note on, my language had to be concise.
syn: terse ant: rambling

A surgical incision is a sharp, clean cut; incisive thinking cuts directly to the heart of an issue.

Every law is an evil, for every law is an infraction of liberty:
And I repeat that government has but a choice of evils.
—Jeremy Bentham, 18th, 19th-century British judge and philosopher

Every law is an evil, for every law is an infraction of liberty:
And I repeat that government has but a choice of evils.
—Jeremy Bentham, 18th, 19th-century British judge and philosopher

UNIT TWO

Every law is an evil, for every law is an infraction of liberty:
And I repeat that government has but a choice of evils.
—Jeremy Bentham, 18th, 19th-century British judge and philosopher
